NAVAL SUPPORT ACTIVITY, Bahrain — Members of Naval Support Activity (NSA) Bahrain attended a cake cutting ceremony for the new Chaplain Religious Enrichment Development Operation (CREDO) Det. aboard NSA Bahrain, Jan. 14.

The CREDO office is designed to give support to the service members and families of NSA Bahrain through its various retreats, programs and activities, which help deal with various life issues.

“Establishing this CREDO detachment as part of the larger regional CREDO team is very important,” said Cmdr. Michael Pumphrey, director of CREDO Navy Region Europe, Africa, and Southwest Asia (EURAFSWA). “It allows us to provide more personal resiliency retreats, marriage and family enrichment retreats, and other CREDO programs to the people we’re charged with serving here.”

We have a focus aligned with what’s being done Navy-wide; focusing on the fleet, fighter, and family. We consider ourselves an important part of that and supporting the resiliency and readiness of the base community.”

In order to better serve NSA Bahrain, the CREDO staff is building their programs to fit the needs that may be specific to those stationed here.

“Rather than bringing someone in who is unfamiliar with NSA Bahrain, who may give a one size fits all type of program, we can look at unique aspects of Bahrain and offer things that are pertinent and relevant to the personnel who are stationed here,” said Lt. Cmdr. Dennis Kelly, deputy director of CREDO EURAFSWA. “It’s good to have someone here who has the insight to NSA Bahrain, but to also have that local point of contact where we can get the word out and reach people in the community by building relationships throughout the base.”

NAVAL SUPPORT ACTIVITY, Bahrain — Navy Entertainment with Armed Forces Entertainment, and Morale, Welfare, and Recreation (MWR) brought actor Stephen Lang to perform “Beyond Glory” with honorary appearances by Medal of Honor recipients Don Jenkins and Walter J. Marm, Jr. on board Naval Support Activity (NSA) Bahrain, Jan. 19.

“Beyond Glory” tells the story of eight Medal of Honor recipients, from World War II, Vietnam and Korea, who Lang portrays. Lang wrote his “Beyond Glory” performance based on the book from Larry Smith.

“The stories are from individuals as different as different can be,” said Lang. “The only thing that truly unites and binds these men with cords of perdurable toughness at a

The Bahrain Schools Host National Geographic Bee

By MC1 (SW) Steve Smith
Staff Writer

NAVAL SUPPORT ACTIVITY, Bahrain — Bahrain Elementary and Middle Schools held the National Geographic Bee for ten school finalists from the 4th through 8th grades Jan. 8.

The Bee is a program of the National Geographic Society for schools across the U.S., including Department of Defense Education Activity (DoDEA) locations around the world.

“The Bee sparks interest in both the contestants and our student audience to learn more about the world and its many wonders,” said Bonnie Higbee, Bahrain Schools’ National Geographic Bee sponsor. “Bahrain School students see the bigger picture of the world from the island country of Bahrain. They have the opportunity to compete in the national-level competition, which includes other students from other DoDEA schools around the world.”

Natalie Schultz, 8th grader, was this year’s winner after several rounds answering the questions provided by National Geographic. The questions are designed to test a student’s knowledge of geography typically answered with only a single word or a phrase. Questions may require interpretation of maps, graphs, and photographs.

“The bee was very hard,” said Shultz. “I was really surprised when I took the initial test and found out I was eligible to participate in the school’s geography bee. If you are interested in something, don’t let people tell you can’t do it. You just need to study and try your best.”

“Being excited about places and cultures is important for the future,” said Christy Blevins, principal of Bahrain Elementary School. “The children living in a different culture could be seen as having an advantage. They may have actually visited some of the places addressed in the bee. The weakness might be the questions based on U.S. geography. If they have not had many opportunities to travel the vast expanse of the United States they may not have been exposed to as much firsthand information.”

The next step for Shultz will be to take a qualifying test, which will be sent to National Geographic headquarters in Washington D.C. for scoring. If Shultz is eligible, she will then move on to compete at the next level.

The first-place winner from each state-level competition will advance to the national level of the National Geographic Bee, scheduled for May 19-21, 2014, in Washington, D.C. Ten students will advance to the final competition, which will be moderated by Soledad O’Brien.

Chaplain's Corner

Fair Winds & Following Seas

By Shaun S. Brown
NSA Bahrain Command Chaplain

I can remember it like it was yesterday. The CO, a Marine colonel, had just finished the last flight of his career – a career which was rapidly drawing to a close. Like most Marines he loved the Corps and was not happy that his days on active duty were winding down. At his farewell the colonel paraphrased some words once spoken by a commandant, General Krulak I believe: “There comes a time in every Marine’s life when the Corps tells you it’s time to go home.”

Sad to say for the NSA Bahrain community, but one of our much beloved members was recently called home — to his eternal reward: Gordon E. Sheek, Sr., CDR(ret), our Deputy Security Officer. While Gordon served in that capacity for over a year his prodigious service to our great nation is known far and wide throughout the Fleet.

Having enlisted in 1973 Gordon had loads of sea time under his belt. Serving long and hard, he had a set of CPO anchors pinned to his collars in 1981 and became an Ensign in '87. Throughout much of his career he held positions of leadership – and built teams recognized as second-to-none. Why, here in Bahrain, in the late '90s, the DoD said his was the “World’s Best” Anti-terrorism Force Protection programs three years in a row!

And with Gordon, it was almost as though he, himself, couldn’t serve enough, what with giving his country, his Navy two sons – and a daughter-in-law – on active duty now. He touched the lives of many Sailors over the years; hopefully each will keep Gordon’s legacy alive.

There is no way we mere mortals could ever thank Gordon enough for all that he’s done. Be that as it may, on Thursday, 23 January 2014, at a memorial service at 1300 in P-911 we’ll give it a try. And as we keep his loved ones in our thoughts and prayers, and bid Gordon one final “Fair Winds and Following Seas,” may each of us look to Gordon’s example as a model as we continue to serve.

ELICITATION

From the NCIS Pamphlet on Elicitation

Elicitation is a commonly used and highly effective intelligence-gathering technique using ordinary conversation to extract targeted information from a person in a manner that does not disclose the true intent of the conversation. It can occur anywhere— at social gatherings, at conferences, on ship/facility tours, on the street, over the phone, in writing, and over the Internet.

WHAT IS THE THREAT?

Foreign intelligence entities (FIEs) are adept at taking advantage of professional and social opportunities to interact with people who have access to classified, sensitive, or proprietary information by exploiting an individual's natural desire to be friendly, helpful, or appear knowledgeable. Typically, the objectives of FIEs are to identify and assess people for their suitability as spies—to determine what information they have access to and what might motivate them to give up insider information. Personal information, information regarding their colleagues, and information not publicly available regarding their command, duties, mission, research, and morale, for example, may be very valuable to FIEs. Don't be overly wary of meeting new people to such a degree that you avoid establishing contacts and friendships, just keep in mind that not everyone you meet has the best intentions.

KEY ELICITATION TECHNIQUES

How do you know when the conversation is merely social and innocent or when it is being conducted for a purpose? You don't know, really. However, recognizing the following common elicitation techniques used by FIEs to GET you talking and KEEP you talking is the first step:

Flattery/Appeal to Ego. They may ask your opinion or give value to your opinion. “Your job sounds very exciting. I'm sure you have some great ideas on...” “I bet you were the key person in designing this new product.”

Quid Pro Quo. They may share some bit of info, true or not, with you so you feel obligated to share, as well. “When we have ___ issue, we approach it this way. How would your organization handle it?” “Our organization's infrared sensors are only accurate 80% of the time at that distance. Are yours any better?”

Mutual Interest. They may suggest you are similar based on real or feigned shared interests, hobbies, or experiences. “I couldn't help but hear you mentioned ___, I just got started in ___ last month and...” “Your brother served in the Iraq war? So did mine. Which unit was your brother with?”

TIPS ON DEFLECTING ELICITATION ATTEMPTS

- Don't allow others to control the conversation; the person who asks the questions controls the conversation.
- Listen more than you talk.
- Deflect a question with another question or change the topic.
- Provide a general or a nondescript answer.
- Plead ignorance rather than share information you shouldn't.

LEGAL CORNER

Self-Service Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) Center Opens on February 2nd!

The VITA Center onboard NSA Bahrain will open on Feb. 2, 2014, and will be open Sunday-Thursday from 0830-1630 in the VITA Center Trailer located by the kennels and USO store. You may walk-in to complete your taxes, although setting up an appointment may decrease your wait time. If you would like more information, or to set up an appointment, please e-mail LT Tanya Nikam at tanya.nikam@me.navy.mil.

What does self-service mean?

This year all VITA sites run by Naval Legal Service Command, including the one here in Bahrain, have transitioned to a self-service model. The self-service model provides you with a way to prepare your own tax returns online with the assistance of IRS-certified volunteers. Active duty members and dependents will use the free tax return program provided by Military One Source. Other eligible individuals (i.e. retirees, GS civilians) will use one of various IRS Free File Alliance programs.

Why the changes?

In the past, we were able to offer one-on-one tax preparation to our customers on the basis of ample staff and support for this service. Over the past several years, both the number of volunteers available and the demand for full-service tax assistance have decreased. This is related to the introduction of alternate, low-cost online tax assistance preparation programs.

What are the benefits of using the VITA Center instead of doing my taxes at home?

The VITA Center will have IRS certified volunteers standing-by to answer your questions that may arise while you are completing your taxes.

Do I have to use the VITA Center to complete my taxes for free?

No! You have the option of accessing the online programs by yourself. If you are an active duty member or dependent you may use the services provided by Military OneSource. Military OneSource also has a hotline to call with questions that arise while you are completing your taxes. If you are not an active duty member or dependent you may qualify for IRS Free File Alliance partner services. If you have any questions about these services please contact LT Tanya Nikam at tanya.nikam@me.navy.mil.

Driving in Rain

- ✓ Skidding - Occurs due to slick conditions on the road whether do to rain. In the periods between rainfalls, oil and grease build up on the roads and the warm sun keeps the oil and grease in a liquid state. The most dangerous time for slick roads in rain is shortly after the rain begins and there is a thin layer of water on the roads. Once it starts to rain, the oil and grease float on top of the water creating a very slick surface. The roads are most slippery in the first half hour after it starts to rain. Eventually, the oil and grease will be washed down the drains and the roads will lose that slick coating of oil, but that is not the time to relax because, as the rains increase, the conditions for hydroplaning increase.
- ✓ Hydroplaning -
  - Vehicle speed. As speed increases, wet traction is considerably reduced. Since hydroplaning can result in a complete loss of traction and vehicle control, you should always reduce speed, paying attention to the traffic around you.
  - Tire tread depth. As your tires become worn, their ability to resist hydroplaning is reduced.
  - Water depth. The deeper the water, the sooner you will lose traction, although even thin water layers can cause a loss of traction, including at low speeds.

Coast Guardsmen Serve Bahrain Community on MLK Day

By MC2 Mike Wright

U.S. Naval Forces Central Command Public Affair

NAVAL SUPPORT ACTIVITY, Bahrain — Coast Guardsmen assigned to Patrol Forces Southwest Asia (PATFORSWA) commemorated the life and accomplishments of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. with a community relations (COMREL) project in front of Naval Support Activity (NSA) Bahrain, Jan. 20.

Martin Luther King Jr. Day is observed each year on the third Monday of January, a date selected for its close proximity to King's Jan. 15 birthday.

The cleanup began with a speech from U.S. Coast Guard Capt. Robert Hendrickson, commodore, PATFORSWA, commander, Task Group (CTG) 55.1, who praised his Guardsmen for participating in the event. Hendrickson reflected on the achievements of King and stressed the importance of giving back to the community.

More than 60 Coast Guardsmen representing six patrol boats and several departments throughout the PATFORSWA command were in attendance. Their goal was to fill at least 30 bags of trash from the streets surrounding NSA Bahrain.

"I think it's great that so many people came out to this event. It really shows that we care about the observance of this day, and it looks really great for our command," said Storekeeper 2nd Class Justin Hinkle. "Events like this are important because it helps bring the team together, and it shows the local community that we are here to help out and do as much as we can."

PATFORSWA is the Coast Guard's largest unit outside of the U.S. and has played a key role in maritime security and maritime infrastructure protection operations with U.S. Naval Forces Central Command (NAVCENT). PATFORSWA is comprised of six 110' cutters, shore side support personnel, Redeployment Assistance and Inspection Detachment, Advanced Interdiction teams, Maritime Engagement Team, and other deployable specialized forces operating throughout the U.S. Central Command area of responsibility.

Military OneSource Offers Free Tax Services

By Nick Simeone

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (NNS) — If it hasn't arrived yet, your 2013 W-2 wage and tax statement likely is on its way, and with it the countdown toward the April 15 tax filing deadline.

As preparations begin for the upcoming tax season, military families are being offered a free service to ensure they can meet that deadline from anywhere they may be stationed around the world.

Military OneSource, partnering with H&R Block, is offering all active duty, Guard and reserve forces help in preparing their taxes and in filing their federal and state returns, in addition to the variety of other financial planning services it already provides free of charge.

"No matter where you are, when you call 800-342-9647 or go to [the Military OneSource website], you can access the programs and services," Tony Jackson, a military community and family policy analyst for the service told American Forces Press Service.

The program is designed to address the unique tax requirements and issues affecting military personnel and their families, Jackson said.

With many still likely dealing with holiday credit card bills, the April tax deadline may seem far off. But with many military families having to file multiple state tax returns in addition to federal taxes, beginning the work now on gathering tax-related documents can prevent headaches later.

"Now is the time to prepare, to gather your documents and your questions," Jackson said, "and [you can] to speak to a tax consultant at no cost at Military OneSource."

Additional paperwork at tax time for those living outside their home state that may have rental property or may be subject to taxes where they are currently deployed is a common additional burden, he noted. Military OneSource will provide help filing a federal tax return, as well as up to three state returns, at no charge.

Jackson said some 224,000 federal and state tax returns were prepared for military families last year.

"Nobody ever gets turned away," he said.

The program's tax experts are able to help military families navigate changes in tax laws that may have a particular impact on or benefit for members of the military -- as well as any tax implications related to military benefits, he added.

"They are nationally certified financial planners, so they are definitely qualified to assist families and service members," regardless of the topic, Jackson said.

Reserve component members are eligible for the free service regardless of their activation status, as are veterans within 180 days of being discharged, retired or separated.

The Defense Department established Military OneSource in 2002 to provide comprehensive information on military life free of charge to military families.

crucial moment in their lives, under the most dire and terrifying circumstances of combat, each one of these individuals went above and beyond the call of duty. Whether it was destroying an enemy of overwhelming odds, whether it was dragging wounded comrades to safety, whether it was defending and indefensible position, each of these men went above and beyond the call of duty."

Jenkins and Marm toured NSA Bahrain and visited with service members before attending the performance as honorary guests. After the play, they met with the audience to sign autographs, answer questions, and for photos.

"I was honored to spend a few hours showing Don Jenkins and Walter Marm around the base and introducing them to Sailors, Marines and Coalition Forces," said Capt. David Meron, commanding officer of NSA Bahrain. "It brings home the importance of service, being forward deployed and the continued dedication of today's service members and their contributions to NSA Bahrain."

"Beyond Glory" was performed on Broadway and in Chicago's Goodman Theater. Lang is now taking around the U.S. and to military bases around the world.

"I think the material works for everyone whether you are civilian or military," said Lang. "I think my performances are worthwhile if it helps morale. From my perspective it's a way of being of service using the tools that I've got. I'm too old to fight, but I'll be active with this for a while."

NAVCENT Millionaire's Club Leads Sailors to Financial Success

By MC2 Mike Wright

U.S. Naval Forces Central Command Public Affairs

NAVAL SUPPORT ACTIVITY, Bahrain

— U.S. Naval Forces Central Command's (NAVCENT) Millionaire's Club educates Sailors and civilian personnel on ways to avoid or overcome indebtedness and financial misfortunes while leading members on a pathway to economic stability and enlightenment.

The Millionaire's Club was created for members to share their ideas and thoughts about ways to improve each other's financial independence, stability, creditworthiness, and overall knowledge of today's money markets. Members meet once per month and the club is open to anyone interested in attending.

NAVCENT Command Master Chief (CMDM) Eddie Knight said Sailors need to spend more time investing in themselves and their future.

"Only five percent of enlisted personnel are investing in the Thrift Savings Program (TSP)," said Knight. "TSP is an avenue that allows us to save money over a period of time that is set aside for our future; why not take advantage of this opportunity?"

According to American Family Financial Statistics, the average American household has a savings of $3,800, while maintaining a debt of $117,000. More than 40 percent of Americans are not saving for retirement and have a credit card debt of $2,200.

Attendees not only gain information from each other, but are also visited by representatives from Navy Federal Credit Union (NFCU) and the Fleet and Family Support Center (FFSC).

NFCU offers financial programs designed to help Sailors, including free counseling that focuses on productive, preventive, and remedial forms of financial management. FFSC offers one-on-one financial counseling where Sailors learn about budgeting, home buying, checkbook management, and how to successfully manage finances during deployments.

"We want to set people up for success," said Knight. "If someone doesn't save or decides not to properly invest their earnings, then what would happen if the Navy says that we no longer need your services because of downsizing and that person is out of a job. There are three things that I look for when a service member decides to get out of the military. I ask them if they have at least a two-year college degree, a vehicle that is paid for, and at least $25,000 to $50,000 in liquid assets. This way, at least that person is prepared for what awaits them in the outside world."
